Published by the Students of the

UNIVERSITY OF GEORGIA
To the Memory
of
Walter Barnard Hill
this Volume of Pandora
is dedicated as a token of the love, honor and respect which we felt toward this great and good man during his life, and as a token of the deep and universal sorrow we feel in his loss to us.
Chancellor Walter Barnard Hill

Walter Barnard Hill was born in Talbotton, Ga., September 9, 1851, and was in his fifty-fifth year at the time of his death. He was the son of Judge Barnard Hill, a Georgian of distinction in his day, and Mary Clay Birch Hill, a cousin of Henry Clay. Mr. Hill first attended school in an institution of his home town, and from there came to the University of Georgia, where he graduated with third honor and with an A. B. degree in the class of 1870. Subsequently he received both the degree of Master of Arts and that of Bachelor of Law from the University.

In 1873 he formed a law partnership with Hon. N. E. Harris of Macon and for many years this law firm ranked as one of the ablest in the State. Later the firm became Hill, Harris & Birch and so continued until Mr. Hill was called to be chancellor of the University of Georgia.

In July 1890, the trustees of the University met in Atlanta for the purpose of electing a chancellor. When the people of this State heard the news that Mr. Hill had been elected to this place, with one accord they agreed that the choice was an admirable one. We all know that Mr. Hill was one of the greatest chancellors this or any other University of this country has ever had. Under his leadership and direction, this University has become one of the leading institutions in the South, and of the country. The fruition of the great plans for the future will make this great educational institution a monument to his memory more enduring than one of stone.

He was a very prominent member of the Methodist Church and always took a prominent part in church affairs, serving twice as a delegate to the conference of the Methodist Church South, and was also a delegate to the Evangelical Alliance of the Churches of America. He was also very deeply interested in Young Men's Christian Association work.

He was a finished scholar and a very able writer. Among his literary productions were the Revised Code of Georgia; the Memoirs of the General Conference of the M. E. Church South 1886-94. He also contributed articles to the Century, the Atlantic Monthly and other magazines. He was honored with the degree of L.L. D., by Emory College in 1890 and in the same year received the same degree from the Southwestern University.

As an educator, he had no superior in the country and was generally regarded as the leader of the great educational movements in the South. He was for some time president of the Southern Educational Association.

His death was a great blow to this University. He had reached the full maturity of life and had he lived, it is certain he would have earned an international reputation as one of the ablest educators of our country.

He has gone from among us but the memory of his pure life, his true worth and his Christian character will remain with us always, and will ever be an influence for good in the lives of the youths of the State he loved so well.
Beab Chancellor

Sad and low the solemn sound
Is pealing forth from the old bell
In Georgia's college chapel.
Alas! the summons comes from God
To lay our pilot 'neath the sod,
And o'er our fair and sunny land.

There comes a cloud of grief today.
The nation mourns at such a loss.
For men with hearts so stout and brave,
We would not spare to glut the grave.
But answer, aye! we must! we must!
When God the giver calls his own.

It seemeth an untimely hour
To spare this loved one from our ranks,
While in the zenith of his power
E'er he sees his dream come true,
That Georgia's hope for future years,
Foremost should be throughout the land.

As Moses stood on Pisgah's heights
And, longing, viewed the promised land,
E'en so our seer, with vision clear,
Hath seen the promise of his work.
"Well done," he said, "thou faithful one."
For noble service hath he done,
And built in his people's hearts
A monument of love.
And when the shaft that marks his grave
Shall crumble neath the tooth of time,
Yet will his life, a beacon light,
Point forward still to higher things;
And generations now unborn,
Will reap the fruits of his great work,
When we are silent in the grave.

Shine on! O radiant star of hope!
Within each bosom throbs a heart
That somewhere, sometime must desire
To rise to better, higher things.
'Tis then we hear that still small voice,
A whisper of a love divine
That wins the victory in the end,
And doth remove the sting of death.

Senior Class History

COLLEGE life is over; as we look around and see the old familiar faces with whom we have been associated for the past four years we have a feeling of sadness at the thought of separation.

It is hard to think that we have reached the goal of a four year's ambition only to be separated perhaps forever, from those whom we deem our best and truest friends. We entered the old chapel four years ago. We had our first class meeting, our first experience in the intricate science of politics. With our chosen leaders we set out upon our chosen mission—the defeat of the Sophomore. Strange to say, we were not satisfied with a single victory but continued to make life miserable for our natural enemies.

As we advanced higher up the steep and rugged path of knowledge our disposition changed—we were no longer Freshmen (a term frequently considered as synonymous with fool.) Our ambitions were awakened and we longed for glory and we got our share of it in literature, oratory, athletics, chapel and we have had our share of representatives in every department of college life.

So we are not surprised when we are informed by a Committee from the Faculty that we have been voted the best class in the history of the University—mentally, morally and physically. Really if you doubt the truth of this statement you may look upon the preceding pages and you will find the mark of fame stamped upon the brow of each and every member of the class of 1906.

A List of Examination Questions

N. B.—To the person, first sending to the Editors, a correct set of answers to these questions, the Pandora will give as a reward, a chew of tobacco and a year's subscription to The Orphan's Messenger and The Golden Age. These two valuable publications should be in the waste basket of every household, provided they cannot be utilized for wrapping up empty sardine cans.

1. Why does Will Slaton fondly imagine that the entire universe is interested in the sparkling bit of intelligence that his father is principal of the Boy's High School in Atlanta?

2. Where and why is Macon?

3. (Technical question) Discuss the merits of the Georgia School of Technology. (This question may be omitted if it should appear that there are only “D” merits to discuss).

4. If Hoke Smith bores 5,000 Georgians every day with his “hot air” effusions, and if any one can remember precisely who Alton B. Parker was, how many entirely different and disconnected ideas can Bob Park advance in the course of a one-minute conversation?

5. Describe poetic feet, with especial reference to Bill Gary. (Please be brief despite the tremendous scope of the subject.)

6. Who was Emperor of Rome and Pharaoh of Egypt when Joe Burke and O. J. Franklin entered college?

7. If you bought Phil Davis for what he is really worth and sold him for what he thinks he is worth, what profit would you make? Ans. Infinity.

8. If it takes three months to extract an express package from the clutches of the old fossil who has charge of the office, and if the Seaboard train is always three hours late, how many bales of cloth would it take to make Great Scot, Baby Wray, and Lawyer Haupleton suits of clothes?

9. If the directions in Derrick's hotel room, read “Three rings for ice water,” and if he places the pitcher carefully beneath the bell and then pressed the button three times, why didn't the water come?

10. What claim has Tommy MacMillan to prominence, except his good clothes?

11. (Special question for John Fawcett.) Write a history of the University of Georgia from its earliest days to the present time.

TWO worthy historians have already paid their tribute of respect to the notable class of '07. Two years of momentous history in the annals of the present Junior Class have been recorded already and still "The half has not yet been told." The task of the present historian is far greater than that of his predecessors, for, with the passing years of college life, the deeds of the class of '07 have grown more wonderful in degree and importance.

Three years ago our class of "Notables" assembled on the campus and in an organized band at once proceeded to seize "Father Time by the forelock." Each succeeding year has found that grip tightened as never before, until now all things recognize the power of our grasp and the strength of our embrace.

For two years we only "felt our way" and were "hearers" of college deeds rather than "doers" of them. But now our time has come. No longer are we dubbed "Fledgeling Freshman" or branded "Upstart Sophs," but by all who know us we are known as exulting and triumphant Juniors; exultant we stand in college circles, for opportunity has knocked and found us waiting with true and ready grasp; triumphant we feel, for even now we catch the glimmer of the days when the Seniors will vanish from before our presence, yielding the stage of action to worthy successors.

Two acts of the great college drama have been performed well and the third act has almost come to a successful close. In this act we have displayed every phase of college activity. Difficult scenes have we encountered, and yet our "hits" have given us a record almost perfect. We have proved equally successful in the tragedy of a "bust," the "comedy of a lecture" and the "farce of an examination." In recitation rooms we have acquired the ability to say "no" almost as tactfully and gracefully as "yes." Our instructors have so marvelled at our general "all-round ability" that they have often persisted in recording our marks in "round numbers."

The society halls have echoed to the clarion tones of our gifted speakers, and the cause of the weak has been made to triumph through the aid of the persuasive eloquence of our pleaders.

To the college publications our gifted pens have given their best productions, and many a "way-faring fool" has been refreshed and exhilarated by the humor of our humorists, the poems of our poets, the fiction of our novelists, and the truths and lessons of our "literati."

On the athletic field, in football, in baseball and in track-meets we have contributed our full share. We have contributed our quota of "sluggers" to football, our due number of "base-runners" to the track team, and a large amount of promise to the baseball team.

Much more could the historian write of the class of '07, but our records will live best in the minds of those with whom we associate. Fellow Classmen, may your next year's record be such that the historian will have to resort to the help of assistants that he may tell of the wonder and glory that shall be yours.

To the class of 1908 the past year has been one of successful progress. We look back with pride upon a record glowing with brilliant deeds and resplendent with courageous acts. What we did and the countless ways by which we benefited suffering humanity in our Freshman year have been enumerated in a previous issue of the Pandora. It is now the happy lot of the historian to recount the glowing deeds done in a year that advances us another quarter toward the goal to which each member looks with a hopeful and envious eye. Passing successfully through the green stage into one more cultured, by means of that foul agent—final examinations—the majority of the class of 1908 were pronounced "dignified Sophomores" and went away with the determination to continue the record so well begun.

When the chapel bell rang on the morning of September an unusually large class answered to roll call. Since then, although some have dropped by the wayside and others have sought work in more congenial fields, we have remained a compact, working body. We regret that a few of our number preferred the path of ease and idleness to that of "boning," but we are pleased that the greater part has done its duty faithfully and well.

In every field of activity 1908 has done its part nobly and has won its share of college honors. In literary fields, especially, have we excelled. One has but to enter the halls of the literary societies on Wednesday night to hear the stentorian voice of some oratorical "Soph" as he tears to pieces the arguments of Freshmen, Juniors, Seniors and even the logic of the learned Lawyers. Thirty-two able declaimers contested for the ten places in the Sophomore oratorical contest, and so considerable were their efforts that it is rumored the judges cast lots to decide the contest.

In athletics, 1908 has indeed carried off the palm. In football, out of the eleven men on the 'Varsity, 1908 had six regulars and one substitute. So strong was the playing of these men that our 1908 man was chosen to captain the Red and Black to victory at the coming season. In baseball we did not do so well, yet three of the huskies on the squad were "Sophs" and even on the field could be heard the voices of 1908 men cheering our team to victory. On the track team, among the stars, six could be found that claimed allegiance to our class. On field day we captured the relay race with such ease that the next team feared lest it would be lapped in the race. In tennis also, we have held our own. The winner of the championship at the University was a Soph; while an '08 man holds the distinction of being the first captain of a basketball team at the University. So in every branch of athletics we have taken a prominent part.

But with all our good and bad works another year has flown swiftly by. Half of our college course is finished. Have we done well? Yes, and better still, for since the planting of our tree in September 1904 she has breasted all gales successfully. The storms of opposition and discouragement have beaten their furious blasts around her sturdy trunk; but for two years her growth has been steady. Though at times bent and twisted by the storm she stands still, rugged 'tis true but firm and resolute to the tempest. In her branches has sunk deep the waters of learning, while the strenuous blast has but inured her to greater hardships. May she ever grow and thrive in the cause of higher education and when the time comes to end her existence, may she still be standing as she now stands, a living monument to all that is noble and true.

Freshman Class History

THE readers of the Pandora have perhaps become wearied of class history, and it may be that by now they would hesitate to read Freshman history were it not for the fact that this is the class that has unconsciously and without effort, drawn the attention of practically all who know even a small portion of her achievements. She has won admiration from faculty, fellow students (Sophomores excepted), citizens of Athens of all sexes, and even the “Lucies.”

It was on the evening of the seventeenth of September, if I mistake not, that the Freshman class came together on the campus and declared they would have Sophomore hair, at any cost. Well, could you have seen the Sophomores kicking sand across the campus, down Lumpkin or up College Avenue, you would have laughed indeed. But it is over now and we will respect them enough not to exaggerate the matter, but the truth of it is too good to be a secret. Yes, the Freshmen caught them, scrapped them, and amid their manful efforts to scrap or weep or plead, as the case may have been, took the curly ocks that had so long been their pride. ’Twas so mean in the Freshmen to make their heads look so badly.

Refrain from thinking that the class of ’09 has done nothing but foolishness for she has been full of the “go-forward” spirit along all lines. She has been appearing on the athletic field on all occasions, in full force, and, amid her anxiety, yelling in loyal love for “Georgia” while several of her brave sons applied their skill and put forth their utmost energy to place the wreath o’er Georgia’s brow. When the season came for each class to yell for its own nine the Freshmen were found on hand shouting, yelling, and tossing their hats as victory seemed inevitable. “Who will win the pennant?” was the question. Hard was the struggle for the Juniors to hold the score of seven to six in their favor.

I hope that you are not at all of the opinion that the class of ’09 has been indulging too much in sports. I mention literary work last because it is most important; because I am anxious that the history leave the right impression upon you. You may rest assured that you are not reading “hot air” when you read that no class has ever done better work in its Freshman year than that of ’09. No class has brought more glory to herself and her Alma Mater than she will have brought in a few more years, no class has ever studied more or rode the pony to a better advantage. Only a very few of her sons have proved unfaithful.

The history of ’09 has been, indeed, hard to write for it is too large to wrap in so small a package. You will please bear this in mind and read between the lines accounts of deeds almost wonderful done by the ’09 class. When you read this in the Pandora remember it, for when years shall have passed you will probably wish to know much of the many able men that were, in the year that has just passed, members of the Freshman class.

G. W. GLAUSIER, Historian.
A Sample of Our Correspondence

Editor’s Note:—During the preparation of the mass of iniquities which we have perpetrated upon an innocent public under the name and style of The Pandora, we have been worried by divers and sundry suggestions at the hands of the student body, as to matter to be paced therein. We insert here a few of these advisory epistles. On account of limited space all cannot be used; but in order that humanity may have the benefit of what we can use, we publish a sample, and apologize to the others for our partiality.

Dear Mr. Editor:—I am considered an exceptionally handsome man, the ladies especially admire my looks. I am sure that my photograph would add materially to the attractiveness of your volume. The breadth of my shoulders may cut out the margin of the page, but nevertheless I feel confident that it will be space well used. I enclose a striking picture which I am sure will be of service to you.

Modestly yours,
Gene Ransom.

To the Editorial Board:—Some one has said that “Punning is the lowest form of wit,” but I do not believe it. True, I have noticed a gentle sigh whenever I have tried my hand at punning in the average assembly, but I attribute that to a false sense of humor. I am sure that my puns are good, at least I made a hit in Madison. If you want to make The Pandora a success, you may call on me for a fresh, new supply of original puns. I am convinced that they will give a sort of “Mark Twain” atmosphere to your book.

Yours,
D. Madison Lowndes.

Gentlemen:—I notice that it is a custom to place a man’s college record under his picture, when as a Senior his face is allowed to blot the pages of The Pandora. But I am afraid that when I become a Senior my record of honors will be too long for publication. Hence, if you will permit a modest suggestion, you will begin printing my honors now, it may save you a page later on. I am now Assistant Track Manager, Sophomore Debater, and member of the Maconites. I also play tennis.

Very truly,
John B. Harris.
Dear Sir:—I am an excellent all-round man. I play a good game of football. I am an exceedingly good lawyer, and a handsome boy. As a ladies’ man my equal has seldom been seen upon the campus. I have also a peculiarly attractive laugh—a combination of a catchy cackle and a gurgling giggle. In brief, it is strikingly like the ripple of a brook in May, and its general effect is made infinitely more pleasing by the dramatic way in which I shrug my shoulders. Would not an autobiography of myself of perhaps 5,000 words be an acceptable contribution.

Sincerely,

Asa Candler.

Dear Mr. Editor:—I would feel a great delicacy in figuring extensively in this issue of The Pandora. Of course I realize that my importance would naturally make me a prominent object of editorial notice, and modesty makes me abhor such a thing. Please do not mention me any more than is absolutely necessary. My quiet habits and reticence about pushing myself into notice are my most marked traits. Above all things do not class me as a ladies’ man. I was blighted in love when I was very young and now I pose as a cynic.

Very truly,

Bob Parker.

P. S. I never talk with anyone on any subject (being naturally quiet). The only way people know me is by my walk, but kindly refrain from confusing me with Stafford Montgomery.

B. (A.) P., LL.D.

Editor of Pandora: Sir:—Through the columns of your book, I want to register a dignified protest. I believe Americans should dress like English lords. I, myself, should have been a lord, for I am far above the common American. But when I sought to show my superiority by appearing in the full regalia of a royalty, monocle and all, the vile populace took me for the advance agent of a circus. With real indignation I make protest against such shocking treatment.

Magnificently yours,

Harry Jones.

Senior Law Class History, 1906

"Of law nothing less can be said, than that her seat is in the bosom of God, and her voice the harmony of the world."

Many are the trials of a class historian. Most frequently the trouble lies in the wish and desire to exaggerate and flatter his class; not so with me. The trouble with the present historian is to make the world believe the truth concerning the law class of '06, because it is so far superior to ordinary classes. Our class is one of the largest since the two-year course was inaugurated in the University. Our men are mostly men with the advantage of an academic training. With such good material, why should our history not surpass the record made by any previous class? In literary work, in journalistic fields, in athletics, skating, billiards and poker playing, we have easily surpassed all opponents. In the political world of the University, we have more than furnished our quota of men. The past year has seen the establishment of another law debating society, the Jeffersonian, which has done much good among its members. The Georgia Law Debating Society, stimulated with new life by competition, has far surpassed any record made in previous years, and has grown into an active branch of the Law Department. Here we have received our first experience in saying “Your Honor and Gentlemen of the Jury.” Here we have met and listened to addresses, by some of the most brilliant men of the Georgia Bar.

With pleasant rivalry in politics, we have had some exciting elections, during our College course, for various offices; but after the elections, we have settled down to earnest work, always with the friendliest feelings for one another. Under the able instruction of that old Southern gentleman of the old regime, Judge Cobb, we have had inspired within us a love for the South, and States rights, which before we never understood.

If our practice of law is not a success, it will not be the fault of Prof. Morris. Ever ready, willing and anxious to give us all the assistance in his power, he has labored faithfully and unceasingly. A friend of each man, taking an interest in the progress of each and every man, out of the class as well as in it. With his guidance we have waded through the fundamental principles of common law. At all times we have been able to guess the answer to his quiz, except when, “Mr. ———, you would be exactly right, if you were not diametrically wrong.” With the able assistance of our true friend, Mr. Blount, we have drawn many legal papers in the never ending litigation of John Milledge versus Abraham Baldwin.

Our two years spent together, in the study of law, have been pleasant ones. With the highest esteem for our instructors and friendship for each other, may we each go out into the active practice of our chosen profession with the determination always to do that which will reflect the greatest credit upon our Alma Mater, always remembering the high ethics of our profession. In after life may our most pleasant memories be those of days spent together, and our chief desire the proving of our friendship for our fellow classmates and the upbuilding of our Alma Mater.

To the '05 Football Team

By William Brantley.

From every one who's seen them play,
Be his college what it may,
From every phase of busy strife,
From country, town and college life,
From o'er the state's great broad expanse
For every down and each advance,
For everything the team has done,
For battles lost and battles won,
The forests whisper, roars the strand,
The hills make echo, o'er the land
From everywhere comes chorus grand

Of praises.

To Captain Sage, to Wray and Clay,
To Wheatley, Smith, to Raoul, McCay,
D. Lowndes, McDonald, Ransom, Nun,
Arrendale, Robson, every one
Who played upon the team this year,
Passavant, Hartridge, Delaprierre,
Who though outweighed, outgeneraled, stood,
Nor thought to yield, nor ever would
The combat leave, tho bloody, torn
By weightier men: a hope forlorn
They struggled on in fact of odds
That would have daunted Grecian gods,
Nor on the conflict c'er turned back
But c'er fought grim for Red and Black
As though than life it were more dear,
And who knew not such a thing as fear:
Unto you all, with pride filled up
We do the sparkling liquor sup,
And drink deep from our brimming cup
A health
To My Fraternity Pin

Ah, golden trinket, thou badge of faith,
A message thou dost bear me.
Thou speakest of love, and death, thou sayest,
"Alone parts those who wear thee."

Thou tellest of might, thou standest for right,
In union thou holdest the best:
Strangers are brothers merely at sight
Of thy shield and armorial crest.

Tho' small is thy size and slight is thy form,
And unset with magnificent gems,
On my lady I swear thou lookest more fair
Than priceless magnificent gems.

A Comedy in Real Life

SCENE I.

Sunday night, about 8:30, in a sitting room in the Derenne’s residence. Miss Beatrice occupied in putting finishing touches to toilette. A bell rings.

Enter Lowndes, Smith and Wheatley.

Miss B.—Good evening, Mr. Lowndes. Bon soir, Mr. Wheatley. How do you do Mr. Smith?

Lowndes, Smith and Wheatley, (together)—Sick in bed, thank you.

Lowndes—Say G. D., do you know any new jokes?

Miss B.—Sit down, Mr. Lowndes, you and Mr. Wheatley. Mr. Smith did you go to Vespers?

Smith—Yes.

Miss B.—Grand ! ! ! ! Cinch Cap ! !

(Loud laughing from the sofa.)

Miss B.—Mr. Wheatley, you and Mr. Lowndes come over here and tell me those new jokes. Mr. Wheatley how is Bessie?

Wheatley—Desperately ill, liable to die any moment.

Miss B.—O, rapturous ! ! ! ! How ostentatious ! ! ! !

Lowndes—Don’t you think that was a pretty hat Miss Beatrice had on at Vespers?

Miss B. (freezingly)—Yes, grand ! ! ! !

Smith—She was certainly beautiful, I couldn’t keep my eyes off her.

Miss B. (laughing)—Go it Mr. Smith. O, have you sent that pin back yet, I am going to get mad if you don’t send it back.

Smith (lying gracefully)—Yes, I sent it back last week.

Miss B.—O joy ! O bliss ! O rapture ! ! !

Lowndes—Miss Beatrice, what Vesper engagement can I have with you?

Miss B.—I have them all up to the 42nd. You may have that one.

Lowndes (despairingly).—For God’s sake. (Aside) O Hell—O !

Miss B.—Did you all go to church?

Lowndes, Wheatley and Smith (together).—Yes; we didn’t see you though.

Miss B.—Grand ! ! ! ! !

Mr. Smith—Miss Beatrice, how is Archie, you have not asked about him for five minutes?

Miss B. (freezingly).—Is that so? Did you go to Vespers, Mr. Smith?

Smith (sarcastically).—Oh no.

(Exit Smith and Lowndes to the dining room.)

Wheatley—(lovingly to Miss Beatrice),

“Take all the world that e’re was told,
   Since first the world began,
Increase it twenty-thousand fold,
   If mathematics can;
Add all the love that e’re shall be
   ’Till Gabriel’s final call,
And when compared with mine
   ’Twill be Infinitesimal.

Miss B.—GRAND ! ! ! ! Go it, Mr. Wheatley.

Smith and Lowndes, (returning from the dining room smacking loudly.)—Cut that out.

Wheatley—Back to the pantry. (Smith and Lowndes immediately obey.)
Wheatley, (singing softly to Miss Beatrice, gazing lovingly into her—purse.)

"Sweetheart, I'll love you ever,
Oh, doubt me never, etc."

Smith and Lowndes (from pantry a dish is heard to fall.)—Holy smoke! What's broke loose with Wheatley and Miss Beatrice. (They tip silently to the door and peep in, finding Wheatley on his knees to—find a nickel he has dropped, (nit). They cough loudly, Wheatley jumps up, Miss Beatrice blushes.)

Miss B. (endeavoring to relieve an embarrassing situation.)—Mr. Smith, did you go to Vespers this afternoon?

Smith, (rolling his eyes up and looking like he is going to faint.)—For goodness sake! Yes.

Miss B. (looking shocked.)—Mr. Wheatley, did you find that nickel you dropped? (Smith and Lowndes giggle up their sleeve. Miss Beatrice looks cheap.)

Wheatley (bravely)—Yes I found it all right. (Miss Beatrice looks relieved.)

Smith, (to Lowndes in another attempt to relieve the situation.)—I'll shoot you a game of billiards in the morning. What do you say?

Lowndes, (feigning surprise.)—Why, what do you mean? I don't shoot billiards.

Smith, (seeing the break he has made and endeavoring to cover it up.)—I don't mean billiards, I meant ten-pins.

Miss B. (winking at Wheatley and speaking with a note of triumph in her voice.)—I see! You reckon—?

Smith and Lowndes, (catching the wink on the fly.)—O, Miss Beatrice, I thought you said that you never winked at boys.

Miss B. (at a loss what to say.)—Mr. Wheatley, did you say that you went to Vespers? How is your Lucy Cobb girl? (Smith falls out of his chair.)

Wheatley, (looking like he is going to commit suicide and gazing appealingly at Lowndes who has grown used to it and only smiles.)—Yes, I did. (Aside) __________!!

(At the count of eleven Smith rises groggily from the floor looking wildly for his hat.)

Enter Jennie.

Jennie—It is eleven o'clock and papa says don't forget his rule.

(Smith, Lowndes and Wheatley bid a hasty good-night and retire.)

(Exeunt all.)

Curtain.

SCENE 2.

In front of the house. Smith, Wheatley and Lowndes engaged in rolling cigarettes. Strains of "Forgotten" are heard from within.

Smith—Whew!

Lowndes—Every time I come here I fall more and more in love with Miss Beatrice.

Wheatley—The same snake bit Andrew on the heel. But laying all foolishness aside, she's a queen.

Smith—You're mighty whistling.

Lowndes—This isn't getting up Phil's math.

Smith—Let's ramble. Well Lowndes, we'll see you later.

(They separate singing "Farewell, farewell, my own sweet love, etc.")

FINIS.

Respectfully submitted,

Upon the Gift of a Georgia Pennant

Be not ashamed to let this pennant hang
Proudly in a high and honored place
For the walks and halls it represents once rang
With the footsteps of the proudest of our race.

Call the roll through, old Georgia's mighty roll
Of heroes who have trod the road to fame
For a century or more, the mystic scroll
Will show that here to most ambition came.

And hence she doth from out her portals wide,
Send forth the future greatness of the State,
To grapple with the problems, and to guide
Its steps and keep it proudly 'mong the great.

Here inspiration from her shaded dells
They drink, and knowledge from her ancient halls;
Ambition's fount is here and upward wells
And sprays each breeze that brushes through the walls.

And let us trust that many ages hence,
Her flag will still be proudly borne on high.
By Georgia's noblest sons whose recompense
To her is to their State true loyalty.
(With most profound apologies to Rudyard Kipling and his "Screw Guns")
Smoking my pipe at the window, sniffing the morning air,
I sit every morn about daybreak, plugging away in my chair.
With nothing but books all around me, and never a moment of peace
As I know I must slave thus for two weeks before I can hope for release.

For you all know the exams—the exams they all know you,
And when the time comes for exams of course you will know what to do—
Just write what you know on your paper (hot air's no use, nor are shams),
Then the gods in the skies supplicate for your rise, for you can't get out of exams.

Some spend all their time in a frolic, shoot billiards, or else they play ball,
And sometimes they go to their classes, but mostly do nothing at all.
They're loafing and having a good time, they're taking things easy are they?
Well soon all these sons of sweet leisure misfortune will claim as her prey.

For you all know the exams—
Then some will be put on probation, or else, having failed for a pass,
They'll bottle their pride and drop backward and enter the freshman class.
But if they're already of that tribe there's nothing left for them to do
But pack up their kits and belongings and hit the trail home p. d. q.

For you all know the exams—
Oh exams are the things that rules, the little gods whom we obey.
And we are only the tools with which the little gods play.
Do you say that your life is your own or foolishly say you will rise?
By gad you are sadly mistaken and doomed to a Fools Paradise.

For you all know the exams—the exams, alas, know you.
And when the time comes for exams of course you will know what to do—
Just pass in your short-written paper—its worse if you studies or crams:
You can do what you please, but you get no degrees until you pass off your exams.

The Newspaper From Home

You may read your “New York World” if you like,
   And your “Washington Gazette;”
You may gaze for hours in a “Vanity Fair”
   At the face of a French Soubrette
You may feast your eyes on the “Boston Sun”
   That you’ll find where’er you roam,
But the newsiest news in all the world
   Just give me the paper from home.

With its “patent sides” and its gaudy ads,
   And its “War News” old and dry
With its “City Chat” and “Heard Around Town”
   And its eds, on “Drinking, and Why”
With its sticky ink and smearing type
   And its wood-cuts centuries old,
It may look “bum” to the outside world
   But to me it is sweeter than gold.

It will tell of who John went to see
   On last Sunday afternoon;
It will tell just why Tom Johnson got
   That horse a little soon,
It will tell of all that’s dear to you,
   Of your family, friends and girl,—
Why its really the only NEWSPAPER
   Thats printed in all the world.

Nonsense Verses

"Where there's smoke there must be fire,"
We'll back this statement entire.
   Go look at Smoak's head
   And if it ain't red,
We cheerfully admit we're a liar.

A broad shouldered lad named Ransom
Was so exceedingly handsome
   'Tis said that for fear
   A camera was near
He'd pose all the time and look mansome.

Young Stafford Montgomery of Rome
Holds the record for all time to come
   In the country one night
   He walked 'till daylight,
Which we guess was walking 'em some.

When gazing out o'er the drill lot
And thereon appears great Scott,
   Does his manly stride
   Always fill you with pride
At the wonderful soldier we've got?

Freshest of Freshmen hunt we!
But folks interrupt with a "Gee,
   Just cut out the talk,
   He wins in a walk,
Go and find Phillips, R. E."

Walker's the gentleman's name,
First niche in the Hall of Fame,
   Of biscuits one even
   He ate twenty-seven—
Each day he has one just the same.
Did you ever think how silly
And ridiculous 'twould be,
For all the fat men in the world,
To jump into the sea?
Why, all the land would disappear
Beneath the deep blue sea;
Most anyone can comprehend,
How dangerous 'twould be.
The fat men then could show their worth,
Now can't you understand?
No doubt they'd gladly save the world,
By jumping back on land!

—G. B.

The pot said to the kettle,
   With a sly wink at the pan:
"What makes your face so very black?
   Please answer if you can."

The kettle simply smiled and said,
   Just as he turned to go:
"It seems to me as if yor face
   Is not as white as snow."

Too Base Hits

The Editors of The Pandora trust that these knocks will be received in the same spirit in which they were written. However if anyone is disposed to take offense we respectfully refer him to our fighting committee, consisting of Linton Gerdine, Chairman; Pete Cranston and Professor Strahan, where he may obtain complete satisfaction.

A noisy, heartsome, robustious creature—Harrison Jones.

Here is something lately hatched—Linton Gerdine.

"This hairy ape doth much resemble man,
But yet in sooth he is not."

"Beg a hair of him for memory."—Normal School Great Scott.

He's a pleasing elf enough,
But lazy as the devil."—Alvin Zach Cox.

"Thy plainness moves me more than thy eloquence."—Henson.

"I advise that thou shift a shirt."—Cadet Camp in toto.

"Nature abhors a vacuum, so she fills some men's heads with saw-dust."

—Si Hawkins.

"Sublime Tobacco."—Professors Strahan, Hooper and Sanford.

Hartridge (just after a Georgia defeat.)—"Say, G. D., what in the world are you wearing red and black socks for today?"

Wheatley—"Oh, just to show that I am loyal in de-feet."

"I pray you write me down an ass" (Balaam's favorite.)—Cabaniss.

"I am too handsome for a man; I ought to have been born a woman"—Ransom,
(by request.)

"Some men were born for great things,
Some were born for small,
Of some it is not recorded
Why they were born at all."—Glassy Mays.

"Go, some of you, and fetch a looking glass."—McMillan.

"How much in love with himself and that without a rival."—Marshburn.

"O, bed, bed, bed, delicious bed."—Rollin Broughton.

"He is a man of unbounded stomach."—Gillon.

Confusion now hath wrought his masterpiece—Chu lu Montgomery.

He would shake hands with a king on his throne and think it kindness to his majesty—Geo. Hains, Jr.
Professor Woofter (the rain beating a terrific tattoo on the roof.)—Well young gentlemen, I don't see how we can have any recitation in Ethics this morning as the rain seems to have the drop on us.” (Loud laughter and tremendous applause.)

And on the stone say simply “He was tired.”—Bill Gary.

Rejoice we, nature formed but one such man and broke the die in moulding.
—Lucian Bower.

The faculty loved him and held him so dear.
They asked him to repeat his sad senior year.—Joe Burke.

Man, proud man, dressed in a little brief authority, most ignorant of that of which he is most assured, cuts such fantastic capers before high heaven that it makes the angels weep—Police Force of Athens.

A slaughter of the innocents, shooting birds on the ground, etc. etc.—Soph. English.

God made him, let him pass for a man—Lawyer Moon.

“A head that’s to be let, unfurnished.”—Sam Morton.

Bob Parker (just after The Thalian’s trip to Madison.)—“Say, D. where is your letter from?”
Lowndes.—“Oh, what does that matter (Madi) son?”
(We print this against our better judgment at the strenuous request of D. Lowndes, Esq.—Ed.)

When shall these three meet again?—Biscuit Walker, Soap and Water.

“And regally he smoked and spat, and fearsomely he lied.”—Bob Parker.

Not Hercules
Could have knocked out his brains,
For he had none.—Just any Freshman.

Dr. White (in Chemistry Class.)—“Now, young gentlemen, if I were to ask you—”

Askew (rudely awakened)—“Present!”
(Prolonged cheers. Cries of hear! hear!)

I lie, I steal, I do anything for gain, but who on earth would say I am not pious.—Loke Raoul.

They have never fed on the dainties that are in a book—Jack Hartridge and King Howard.
Facetious Freshman.— "Doctor, will you please tell me the etymology of Nabisco?"

Doctor Campbell (scratching his head.)— "Well, really I am just a bit rusty on my languages but it sounds as if it might be based on some Greek root."

A bright haired company of youthful slaves.— Pandora Board.

Facetious Freshman.— "Doctor, will you please tell me the etymology of Nabisco?"

Doctor Campbell (scratching his head.)— "Well, really I am just a bit rusty on my languages but it sounds as if it might be based on some Greek root."

A bright haired company of youthful slaves.— Pandora Board.

A perfect Chesterfield and that of a noble pedigree.— Alex Lawton wanted this.

If dirt were trumps, what hands you would hold!— Lipshutz.

Look out for squalls.— Red Rock Ginger Ale.

A neat little, sweet little walk up the street, little dude.— Henry Covington.

Who think too little and who talk too much.— Stanley Gates and Sister Kitty Jones.

And 'tis remarkable that they Talk most who have least to say.— Sister Kitty Jones and Stanley Gates.

Awkward, embarrassed, stiff without skill
Of moving gracefully or standing still;
One leg as if suspicious of his brother
Desirous seems to run away from tother.— Jimmy Stanford.

Their various cares in one great point combine
The business of their life—that is to dine.

— Raoul, McAffrey, Winn and Julius Scott.

The puny school boy and his careless lay
Men pardon, if his follies pass away.
But who forgives Brantley's ceaseless verse,
Whose hairs grow hoary as his rhymes grow worse.
One bill the Lord has surely footed.— Bill Gary.

A Life Lesson

You are having your fun today, my lad;
  You know not the harsh hand of care;
Your life is a song of contentment, my child,
  And only a smile will ye wear.

'Tis well that you smile thus today, my lad;
  Tomorrow the clouds may arise,
For life is not ever a song, my child;
  The night dims the fairest of skies.

There are hearts that are breaking today, my lad;
  While yours is happy and gay;
There are souls that are aching today, my child,
  For the youth that you're idling away.

'Tis ever the same old song, my lad,
  Go conquer or fail as you may;
Theres someone must lose if you win, my child,
  In every game that you play.

History

The history of a literary society is best read in the lives of the men who have gone out from its walls to influence the world, and to gain laurels for themselves and the Society which directed and aided them to the procurement of honors. The Demosthenian Society has been rich in historians, its history is told in that of the State and of the nation, its influence is measured and valued in the histories of churches and educational institutions. In no field of high endeavor are there wanting men who proudly yield allegiance to grand old Demosthenian; since its founding, the men of our State of whom we have reason to be most proud have been ready at all times to testify that it was in that simple, gray-stone hall that they first started to think and to speak.

The first record we have of the Demosthenian Society is contained in a series of entries made in a diary kept by Williams Rutherford, then a student of the University, in 1803. Under date of February fifth of that year is recorded, “This day have we, the students of the Junior Class, begun by a general consultation, the establishment of a society for the purpose of extemporizing or extemporary speaking.” On February fourteenth a committee met to draft a constitution and having performed that duty the students for the first time convened in the character of the Demosthenian Society, to do business, on the nineteenth of February. Having organized and elected officers, the Society again met on the twenty-third of February to discuss the first question: “Is a Monarchical Government Preferable to a Republic.” Though formally organized as the Demosthenian Society in 1803, the natal year of the Society has for many years been officially regarded as 1801, the year of the organization of the University, for the reason that there were debating societies from the beginning which inculcated Demosthenian principles and were regarded as, in spirit, the same. Meetings were for twenty years held in the old Grammar School rooms, the Society then levied on its members and friends for contributions and built the hall north of the chapel which for over eighty years has rung with eloquence of Georgia’s most distinguished sons and continues as a temple dedicated to the cultivation of thought and speech.

It is hardly necessary to enumerate, at this time, the victories which Demosthenian has won over her opponents, suffice it to say that she has always been creditably represented and has won the palm after many glorious contests. In closing we quote the words of Emory Speer, then newly elected to office as a judge of the federal court, charging his fellow members that they give their honors to the historic Society which affords so many treasures to her disciples. He says in part: “I do not hesitate to say for myself that such measure of success as I have had, and it has been various, and always against strong competition, is due more than anything else to my devotion to the Society during the years I was in college; indeed for the first years of my professional life my Society training was my entire capital.”

History

The success of every organization or institution depends entirely upon whether or not it accomplishes that for which it was made to exist. In other words, to succeed, there must be a definite object and this object must be attained.

Right nobly has Phi Kappa succeeded during the past year. Our object: "To secure mental and moral elevation for its members by social contact and competitive exercises in oratory," we have achieved and no member can deny the specific good and general uplift obtained after attending even one meeting. There has been general good fellowship between our members this year which has not been diminished but increased by the friendly rivalry of debate. To begin with we started the year off with our full share of the new men in college, thus forcefully recruiting our loyal ranks. Then too, we were exceedingly fortunate in the choice of our presidents. They have been men that lent dignity to the office. Thorough parliamentarians, they have been able both to instruct "Ye Freshies" and to correct the old men.

Again, as to our representatives in the various debates, able were they as could be. Mr. Whitman as anniversarian made every loyal Phi Kappa's heart swell with pride by his substantial composition and graceful delivery. The debates have not taken place yet but we have complete confidence in the ability of the men who have been elected as impromptu debaters and Messrs. Weltner and Goldstein as champion debaters. On the Sophomore and Freshman debates we find such men as Harris, Bussey and Miller for the Sophomore, while the Freshmen are represented by Messrs. McDonald, Glausier and Hoover. Mr. Lee represented us as one of the two speakers in the North Carolina debate. All of the entries for the Washington and Lee debate are loyal members of the Phi Kappa, so we share no honors there.

Taken as a whole this year has been one of the brightest in our history, and we of Phi Kappa as we gather around our grand old banner, pledge ourselves to its support and drink to the glory of its past achievements as well as to its future success.

LITERARY SOCIETIES
History of the Georgia Law Debating Society

The Georgia Law Debating Society was founded in 1903 and was modeled after the debating societies in the other law schools of the country. The need of such an organization has long been felt, but it was deemed impracticable during the one year law course.

From the day of its inception, Georgia Law has been successful in filling the mission of its founders. In the first place it brings together in one organization, on an equal footing, the members of the two law classes, and it has done much to hasten acquaintance and add to the good fellowship existing between the members of the Senior class and the new men of the Junior class.

"It is the rubbing of mind against mind that causes the spark of truth to scintillate." These were the last words of one of Georgia's most brilliant lawyers, and a graduate of this Law school. It is just such training that the Georgia Law Debating Society endeavors to give its members.

Agreed statements of facts are assigned to members of the society several weeks in advance, and are then argued before three members, sitting as judges. The judges award their decision, not on the personal popularity of the advocate, or their Demosthenian addresses, but on the principles that have been elucidated and proved to govern. This gives valuable training in searching for the law and expounding it at a moment's notice. Cases in this society are conducted as near like actual practice as possible and here the lawyer of the future tastes the first joys of victory, and what is equally important, learns to drink the cup of defeat without personal animosity.

Being only three years old, we have no long list of successful alumni, but all of our former members are doing well, some as Solicitor-Generals while others assist the Solicitor-General in his fight to uphold the laws of the state. All of our graduates speak in the highest terms of the training this society has afforded, and in only a few more years our members will be numbered among the leaders of the bar in this and other states.

The past year has been a successful one. Like all other societies, we suffer from the Spring dullness, but attendance has held up remarkably well, everything considered. No small part of this credit is due to the three presiding officers who have been indefatigable in their efforts to build up the society. We have also had the pleasure and benefit of addresses from members of the Athens bar, whose suggestions and advice will help us avoid many of the pitfalls of the young practitioner.

Historian.
Presidents of Jeffersonian Law Debating Society
REALIZING the benefit that can be derived from the discussion and debate of legal questions, and interest having lagged in the society organized for that purpose, seven members of the old society withdrew and with a number of Juniors organized the Jeffersonian Law Debating Society. As in the case of the withdrawal of members from Demosthenian and the subsequent organization of Phi Kappa it was found that this action revived interest in the old society as well as created a healthy rival.

Although founded on the same lines, the society departed radically in some respects from the principles of the old—of chiefest importance of these was the rule allowing students in the academic department who intended to study law to become associate members and take part in the general debate. This has proved beneficial alike to students of both departments in that it has given a larger audience to the speakers and closer acquaintance with the law to the associate members. The law members have secured the names of all students intending to study law and they are invited to attend the meetings of the society; a reading course in law is provided and recommended to associates. This departure it is thought will draw the two departments closer together and induce students intending to follow the profession to attend the Law School with which they have formed such close ties. Another departure was in having a legal paper or address read or delivered at each meeting by a law member.

The society is in effect a practice court in which there is the actual trial of causes at law upon an agreed statement of facts prepared by the members themselves. Law students are selected for the argument, two counsel on a side, and a law student sits as judge; associate members take part in the general discussions at the end of the argument. Upon the conclusion of the argument the judge renders an oral opinion, in the nature of a decision.

The use of such a practice court is to teach men to stand up and put a case neatly and well to a judge; in it the men acquire a good court manner and a coherency of argument that is not attained except by practice. The education of the lawyer is for the purpose of preparing a man for the practice of law. Young lawyers are lacking more in the ability to present a case than in any other particular and it is to meet this need in the education of the lawyer that this society was organized.

The society has during the year secured some of the ablest speakers in the state to deliver addresses on subjects connected with the law, among them have been the Honorable William T. Newman, the Honorable Frederick Foster, Dean Sylvanus Morris, R. E. Park, Prof. John Morris, Honorable T. E. Reed and Prof. Joseph Lustrat.

An Old Man To Youth

You are gone like the flowers that came in the spring
Like the flowers now dead and sere,
And only the clinging thoughts remain
To remind me of yester-year.

The fancies of youth—of the long, long ago—
Grow dimmer and dimmer each day,
And I already see the dark of night
That will come when they've faded away.

Ah! 'would to my God I could live them again—
Those springtime days of my youth;
But the battle of life each day nears the end,
And I still am no nearer the Truth.

These eyes soon will close; this tongue will lie still,
And these hands will be folded to rest,
But with perfect content I'll lay life aside
To go search for my youth with the blest.

Broke, Broke, Broke

Broke, broke, broke
Are "everyday" terms you see,
But you'd better be glad that the pen won't write
The thoughts that arise in me.

Oh well, for the millionaire's boy
As he rides in his autocar,
And feasts all day on the fat of the land
'Mid the smoke of a fat cigar.

But the "poverty-struck" go on
To their haven under the hill
And sigh from morn 'till eventide
For the sound of the "chink" that is still.

TO WHOM OFFERED.

The University of Georgia does not seek patronage for support, but is itself the patron of all who will seek its instruction. It offers opportunities to all who can profit by them, viz.:

To graduates of accredited schools.
To students coming from approved colleges.
To those who pass the entrance examinations.
To those over twenty years of age who are mature and can profitably undertake undergraduate, professional or graduate work.
To teachers and farmers who seek professional or technical instruction.

The University is the oldest State College in America, having nearly 3,500 living representatives and as many who are among its illustrious dead. It is a high privilege for a Georgia boy to be graduated from this mother of State Universities and enroll his name among its illustrious alumni—men who have made glorious Georgia and the South. These become his friends and helpers in his struggles to succeed.

PLANS FOR A Great Chance

The administration of Dr. Walter B. Hill as Chancellor of the University of Georgia covered less than seven years. In that time the progress of the institution was greater than during any similar period in its history. The number of students was doubled and the equipment splendidly increased; in fact more new buildings were erected during his term than in the forty years preceding it.

His death on December 28 last was a loss to the institution that is almost incalculable, for he had to leave unfinished a plan for the development of the University which would have been more speedily executed had he lived to direct the great work to completion.

Fortunately his hopes for the future development of the University were put into definite plans before his death. He laid the foundation upon broad lines, depending upon the wealth and patriotism of a great state to furnish the funds necessary to build the institution from year to year commensurate with the needs of the people. He looked farther ahead than a few years. The institution over which he presided has already been serving the state in the noblest and most useful way possible for more than a hundred years, and the Chancellor had the wisdom to see that Georgia's great strides forward during the past few years were likely to continue from year to year, with such progress that the present equipment of the University would be rapidly outgrown. He therefore devoted himself to the problem of working out a careful and logical plan for enlarging the University which could be generally followed for many years, with such changes as might seem advisable from time to time under changing conditions.

One line of development for the University which Chancellor Hill considered of great importance was the enlargement of the work in the College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts. He realized that Georgia was primarily an agricultural state, with comparatively no great amount of mineral wealth. He believed firmly with Dean Swift that the man who makes two blades of Ellor’s Vision

...grass grow where but one grew before is a public benefactor, and with the belief that farming conditions in Georgia could be immeasurably improved he wished the University to lead the way in educating the sons of farmers to use scientific methods in agriculture.

Dr. Hill had many earnest supporters in his plans to make the University bring practical results for the uplift of the masses of farmers throughout the state. The alumni of the institution are hearty in their sympathy and approval. A generous friend, Mr. George Foster Peabody, was so deeply interested that he purchased and gave to the University 399 acres of land just south of the old campus grounds, on which the experimental and practical work in the College of Agriculture is to be conducted. The alumni, at the commencement in June, 1905, voted to lend to three of their members, acting as trustees, the Alumni Fund of $10,000, to purchase additional property to round out the tract and connect the farm land up to the old campus proper. Citizens of Athens have subscribed $14,000 toward purchasing this land, and alumni throughout the state have contributed. The cost of the additional land was between $50,000 and $100,000. Less than half of this amount is still to be raised before the land which has already been acquired will be paid for in full.

In order that the farm lands might be connected with the old campus driveways with easy grades, and a comprehensive plan made for the development of the University as a whole, Mr. Peabody agreed personally to lay the expense of the services of a landscape engineer to survey and lay the entire property. Mr. Chauncey Leavitt, Jr., of New York, a man who was among the leaders of his profession, was employed for this work. He made several trips to Athens and had a number of conferences with Chancellor Hill, who explained in detail his ideas for the greater University. Mr. Leavitt embodied these ideas in complete drawings of large size. Reduced prints three of the main drawings are herein reproduced.
